
Religious Kisses.

Guthrie, Ok., March 26.—A new religious sect is holding meetings northwest of here in Garfield and Woods counties. They call themselves "The Perfected Body of Christ," but are designated by the local populace as the "Snake Eaters," because one of the preachers last summer, claiming that he was proof against poison, took up a poisonous reptile and bit a piece out of it. Of late they have introduced a new feature in their services, and large crowds are attending. After the close of the sermon all gather around the altar and embrace and kiss each other. For a number of nights all of the young people near the meeting have been attending and going forward to the altar, and there is much excitement among the people.
